How Can We Increase Gender Diversity?

With a global community of over 2 billion people on Facebook, the case for a more diverse and inclusive company is clear. Diversity helps us build better products, make better decisions and better serve our community.

“Building an open, inclusive environment is core to who we are, and the right thing to do,” added Ari Balogh, the company’s vice-president of engineering, “Nuff said.”

Open.

Humanity is plural, not singular. The best way the world works is everybody in. Nobody out.

Diversity + Inclusion = Success

In over 20 years of committed diversity and inclusion efforts, we've learned that diversity is not a finite goal; it is a journey that requires constant self-assessment and recommitment.

What is counterfeit diversity?

...it's projecting an image of diversity that is inconsistent with reality

Is counterfeit diversity a cue to identity safety or identity threat?

- Underrepresented group members are vigilant to cues signaling whether their group will be valued and respected
- How might counterfeit diversity be construed by female applicants?
  - ...as an identity safety cue—that women will be welcomed and treated with respect
  - ...as an identity threat cue—that counterfeit diversity is a disingenuous mask that is hiding plain old non-diversity

OUR PEOPLE

At Harrison Technologies, we believe that embracing our people enriches our company culture.

We feel that focusing on our people creates a more productive, exciting, and innovative work environment. Such an environment helps everyone.

A focus on our people is woven throughout all of our organizational practices. As soon as you walk through our doors, you'll appreciate the strength that we derive from our people.

Study 1

Actually Diverse

When you actually arrive on site, you look around and notice that there are many women and men working at Harrison Technologies. In fact, it looks like the gender ratio of men to women is about 1:1, meaning about 50% of all employees at the company are women.

Actually Non-Diverse

When you actually arrive on site, you look around and notice that there are mostly men and very few women working at Harrison Technologies. In fact, it looks like the gender ratio of men to women is about 3:1, meaning only about 25% of all employees at the company are women.

*"Diversity is critical to the success of our company—it helps us build better products, make better decisions, and better serve our community. Since establishing Harrison Technologies, we've made some progress toward increasing the number of women employed here. However, our current numbers don't reflect our company's values. We aren't yet where we'd like to be. Now and going forward, we will work hard to recruit and retain more women. In fact, we have several programs in place to help move us towards our goals. - People exposed to Counterfeit Diversity (vs Authentic Diversity)...
  - ...perceived company as less sincere
  - ...women anticipated having more identity threat concerns
  - ...reported less interest in the company
- In Study 3, we found some evidence that expressing a diversity commitment, via increasing perceived sincerity, can alleviate identity threat and increase interest.
- Stating aspirational diversity may be one alternative to counterfeiting diversity that communicates identity safety (vs. threat) and maintains people's interest.

Aspirational Diversity Example

We aren't where we'd like to be, but we're encouraged that over the past year, representation for people from underrepresented groups at Facebook has increased. This year, the number of women globally has risen from 33% to 35% and the number of women in tech has increased from 17% to 19%. Women now make up 27% of all new graduate hires in engineering and 21% of all new technical hires at Facebook. In the US, we have increased the representation of Hispanics from 4% to 5%, and Black people from 2% to 3%.
